1. On 23 December 1950 North Korean troops billeted in houses in Yonghap village, 2 and 1/2 miles north of Kaesong (126-34, 37-58), were telling the residents that Seoul, Pusan, and Kyushu, Japan had been occupied by Communist troops, and that American atomic plants had been bombed and destroyed.*
2. In the late evening of 25 December 1475 Chinese Communist troops moved from Suan toward Singye, armed with M-1 rifles or PPSH's, 73 120-mm. mortars, 52 anti-tank guns, and artillery packs loaded on 200 ponies. Eighty-two youths were seized in areas from Sandung (126-12, 39-00) to Suan to carry artillery and small arms ammunition on back packs, in squads of 12 men each. All packs and personnel were covered with white cloth. On the morning of 26 December this convoy arrived in Singye where the troops were billeted in civilian houses. There were a large number of other Chinese Communist troops in Singye and in Suan.
3. Chinese Communist troops in the Suan-Singye area used roads at night instead of the mountains, to prevent the disclosure of the presence of a large number of troops, which would be revealed by snow tracks in the mountains.

Comment. There was North Korean propaganda in the Koksan (126-40, 38-45) area in mid-December that American atom bomb factories and Tokyo had been destroyed and that the North Korean army was well-equipped with planes and tanks.

1. In mid-December 1950 the 21* and 24 Armies, formerly stationed in Chekiang and Fukien, were under orders to proceed to Kwangtung as replacements for the 27 and 14 Armies, which were sent to Manchuria and Kwangsi, respectively. The vanguard of these armies is reported in the Chuchiang (113-33, 24-50), Hanhsung (114-17, 25-13) and Swatow coastal areas.
2. In mid-December coastal guns at Swatow, Bias Bay, Shanwei (115-22, 22-47) and Aochiao (? 116-30, 23-02) were heavily guarded and the surrounding waters were mined. The Communists are prepared to mine Bocca Tigris if necessary in order to prevent amphibious landings.
3. On 25 December two divisions of the Kwangtung-Kwangsi Column were deployed southeast of Tungkuang (113-46, 23-02) and southwest of Huiyang (114-26, 23-05). It is confirmed that 20 light and medium Japanese-made tanks arrived at Shenchuan.
4. During a 90-day period before 22 December there was a large influx of Russians into Canton. Approximately 500 are billeted at the Oikwan Hotel, Canton.

* Comment. According to a Taipei broadcast on 14 December, the 21 Army moved from Fukien to south Kwangtung early in October.

 Comment. Movement to and elements in Korea of this unit have previously been reported.

Malacky Airfield

1. The airfield at Malacky (P49/432) is located 9.5 km southeast of Malacky and 3.6 km south southwest of Pernek (P49/S91). The military designation is Airforce Base VI, Military Unit 7474, and the total area of the base is 1,400 x 700 meters. One runway, approximately 100 x 60 meters, crosses the center of the field; it is made of concrete with an asphalt surface and is being enlarged for the use of jet aircraft. The rest of the field is composed of sandy, grass-covered soil.
2. The field is serviced by a spur from the Pernek railroad station and by the Malacky-Pernek highway. Three underground gas tanks hold a total of 60,000 liters of 100/130 (sic) octane gasoline. Wooden blast pens, two meters high and built by the Germans, are located on the west side of the field. Vulkano-type radar equipment has been installed at the field but was not yet in use in February 1950.
3. Fog prevails in this area during the winter months, and during the rainy seasons the field is soaked so that only the runway can be used for traffic. A forest which is adjacent to the field on the west also constitutes a hazard.
4. Some of the personnel at the base are:
